- Benefits of Aloe Vera gel- Aloe Vera is most commonly used as a topical treatment for cuts, burns and other wounds – and with good reason. 1)Moisturizes Skin- Aloe vera gel has been touted by many as their go-to moisturizer. It has shown miraculous effects on oily and acne-prone skin.
- 2)Helps With Sunburns - Aloe vera is widely used as an after-sun treatment because it is soothing and reduces inflammation.
- 3) Prevents Premature Signs Of Aging & Reduces Acne And Helps Lighten Blemishes - Wrinkles and fine lines are bound to appear as you age. But, Aloe vera helps in preventing these early signs of aging & the aloe gel can work wonders on your skin by reducing acne and clearing the blemishes and scars that get left behind.
- 4)Reduces Dandruff- Aloe vera is a widely used ingredient in many commercial shampoos and conditioners. This is because it works wonders for dandruff and dandruff-related problems such as an itchy scalp.
- 5)Maintains pH Balance Of The Scalp & Conditions Hair - When the pH balance of your hair is disrupted, it can lead to endless hair problems. Aloe can help maintain the pH balance of your hair. Aloe vera can put even the best conditioners to shame. It is moisturizing in nature, and hence, strengthens your hair and adds shine.

Activated charcoal soap Pack of 3

- Throughout the day, toxins from the world around us clog our pores. When your pores aren't clear, neither is your complexion. Activated charcoal when used in a face mask binds to and helps pull the dirt out of your pores, making them less visible (it's the oil and dirt that makes them appear bigger). This leaves your face feeling fresh.
- Activated charcoal may be just the ingredient you need to balance things out. Used in a cleanser or mask, activated charcoal can pull the unwanted excess oils from your skin, leaving it smooth. You'll want to do this sparingly once or twice per week at the most so that you don't over-dry your skin. If you already have dry skin, best to steer clear of it for this use, as you don't want to dry it out even more.
- Depending on the specifics of your acne how severe it is, what's causing it and what else is going on activated charcoal may be able to help. In soap form, it's slightly gritty, which might provide just the gentle exfoliating you need. It will also absorb oils and toxins on and below the skin. You can use it as a spot treatment if you don't want to use it on your whole face just think of it as a mini mask for your blemish.
- Glycerin increases the thickness of the epidermal layer and improves barrier function. It helps keep harmful chemicals and environmental elements out of the skin and locks moisture in. : Glycerin is able to guide cells to grow and mature more effectively, thus helping the skin heal. Glycerin also acts as a natural medication for fungal infections like eczema and psoriasis, by reducing bruising and helping the infected tissue and cells to repair themselves more quickly.
- Glycerin acts as a very effective moisturizer on the skin. It makes your skin absorb water
